

Reflection

Looking back on your week of tracking time, where did the time go? Do you feel good about how you use your time? Is there something that you might change? How can you find enough time to do all that you want to do? Are there some ways that you can slow down? Are their links between time and relationships? You do not have to answer every question! Jot some notes down, be prepared to share as you feel comfortable.

Reflection

Looking back on your week of tracking time, where did the time go? Do you feel good about how you use your time? Is there something that you might change? How can you find enough time to do all that you want to do? Are there some ways that you can slow down? Are their links between time and relationships? You do not have to answer every question! Jot some notes down, be prepared to share as you feel comfortable.

Reflection

Looking back on your week of tracking time, where did the time go? Do you feel good about how you use your time? Is there something that you might change? How can you find enough time to do all that you want to do? Are there some ways that you can slow down? Are their links between time and relationships? You do not have to answer every question! Jot some notes down, be prepared to share as you feel comfortable.

Reflection

Looking back on your week of tracking time, where did the time go? Do you feel good about how you use your time? Is there something that you might change? How can you find enough time to do all that you want to do? Are there some ways that you can slow down? Are their links between time and relationships? You do not have to answer every question! Jot some notes down, be prepared to share as you feel comfortable.